uk researchers followed the progress of 1,500 prostate cancer patients and 3,000 people without the disease over a 15-year period.